MAJOR RECENT ANNOUNCEMENTS

- Garfield County commissioners voted to allow Ruby's Inn, located at the entrance of Bryce Canyon National Park, to become its own town. State law requires counties to approve a new town of 100 to 1,000 residents on contiguous land outside a municipality if landowners with more than half the combined property value want it. The new city will retain most of its sales tax revenue, estimated to be $300,000. Only 4% of the county is private land and the remaining property is held by federal or state governments.¹
- The $4.2 million Garfield Memorial Hospital expansion has been completed. The new expansion include a larger clinic, fully equipped trauma and exam rooms and a long-awaited emergency room upgrade.²
- The Utah State Tax Commission released data showing a continued taxable sales growth of 14% from fourth quarter 2007 to 2008 for Garfield County. Much of this is due to increased visitors and tourism spending in the area.
